- CONSOLIDATION OF TROLLEY SYSTEMS

Big Enterprise Headed by Sex in America to Be Their Westinghouse.

ENGINEER WALLACE IN IT MISS KANG TUNG PIH'S PLANS

Protect Themselves by Control and Organization.

From New York comes the statement that John F. Wallace, late chief engineer of the Panama canal, is to become one of the executives of a great syndicate, headed by George Westinghouse, that will undertake to carry out this big terprise, to buy, build, and systematize the trolley lines of the country, and the domain of the Dowager Empress to give the 100,000,000 women of the Chi-

Railways Protect Themselves. This means, it is understood, that the steam railroad interests are prepared to protect themselves against damaging competition of the trolley lines, by organizing them into a general system and making such rates, schedules, financial and operating arrangements, as will assure that the competition will be put on a basis that will not unduly affect female foot. the steam roads. In the matter of local passenger traffic. especially, the trolleys have been proving a thorn in the side of the steam railroads. They have in some sections occasioned a striking reduction in the passenger revenues of the railroads, and the situation has come to be regarded as serious.

In New England the plan of community of interest between railroads and trolleys are confronted by the prospect of having many of their best lines the avowed purpose of regulating the freight and passenger rate situations.

Competition for Business.

From the railroad point of view the demoralizing feature is in the use of the electric road to bring competition into a field. A town which has only one line of steam road and thinks it needs cometition in rates frequently builds a trolley line to connect with the most convenient steam railroad.

The connecting steam road, anxiou for a good slice of the town's freight. but bound by its territorial agreement not to invade the place, makes good terms with the trolley company. The railroads, however, have found that such arrangements tend on the whole to demoralization of their rates.

The trolley systems of the country have been developed thus far in the same manner that the railroads were up to two or three decades ago. Local lines have been built without especial view to development of great systems.

Just as the era of railroad consolida dust as the eta of rainfoad consonda-tion caused these local lines to be patched together into great systems, so, it is supposed, the Westinghouse syndi-cate believes the time has come for the consolidation of the trolleys into a gen-

One of the most delightful short trips on the river is that of the steamer Charles Macalester on Friday and Saturday evenings during this month to Indian Head, the boat leaving at 6.30 o'clock and stopping at Marshall Hail on both the down and up trips. This is to give those excursionists who take the 10 a. m. and 2:30 boat in the afternoon to Marshall Hail an opportunity to enjoy the sail to Indian Head if they wish after spending the afternoon at that delightful resort. The Macalester is fitted up for the comfort of those who make these trips and in addition to being commodious and comfortable affords excellent dining room service. At this season of the year when the weather turns everyone's thoughts to the river and kindred cool regions these trips form one of the most attractive sources of recreation to be found.
